

Our Analytical Sciences contribute to success

Our experts in this area come from an organization which contributed their Analytical Chemistry expertise to all business units in a blue-chip chemical company. Their knowledge is deep and broad and is of immense value to companies looking to solve problems, meet regulatory requirements, develop new products and processes, and study product failures. Of particular value to our clients is their ability to solve unique problems, develop new test methods, and provide third party verification of test data. For example, our analytical chemists are consulting on method development for polymers intended for food contact applications. One strength is our knowledge of how to meet these evolving FDA and REACH regulations.

Contact us at research@stride2future.org to learn more.